

I believe the Do not call law should stand as it. There is nothing worst then having your quality time at home interrupted by solicitors. That should be considered an invasion of privacy. I can not tell you how many times a member of my family had to lose a day of work because they were sick and were not able to rest in our own home due to the intrusion of solicitors. We would have to take our phone off the hook to get rest. I believe they should have no rights. That's like walking into our home uninvited.

Sincerely,
Jeanette Applegate
